

Important information about H1N1 Influenza and your facility.

Here are some facts about H1N1 Flu and how our Health-Based Cleaning System<sup>SM</sup> program offers you a powerful defense against this public health threat for the same cost or less than your current commercial cleaning service.

FACT: H1N1 Influenza is a respiratory disease caused by type A influenza virus. H1N1 Flu is contagious and can be transmitted by contact with contaminated surfaces such as a bathroom doorknob or faucet handle. The Coverall Health-Based Cleaning System<sup>SM</sup> program uses EPA-registered, hospital-grade cleaning products proven effective at killing influenza A, the virus that causes H1N1 Flu. As surfaces are decontaminated, Coverall® uses a combination of equipment and proprietary cleaning methodologies to ensure the proper removal and disposal of contaminants.

FACT: All strains of flu virus, including H1N1 Flu, can live up to 72 hours on a surface. Without proper cleaning and disinfection, people are at risk of contracting the virus. The Coverall Health-Based Cleaning System program uses microfiber cleaning cloths, scientifically proven to capture and hold 99% of bacteria and viruses. Our proprietary, color-coded cloth system for high-contact touch points prevents cross contamination. If an outbreak of H1N1 Flu or other contagious illnesses occurs in your facility, Coverall has a decontamination cleaning program available upon request.

FACT: Areas with high levels of contamination include break rooms, waiting rooms, kitchens, desks and restrooms. Coverall pays special attention to high-contact points throughout your facility including doorknobs and faucet handles in all high-risk areas to reduce the spread of illness-causing germs.

FACT: Personal hygiene and regular disinfection in between cleanings are as important as the Health-Based Cleaning System<sup>SM</sup> services we provide to combat illness-causing germs. To optimize your defense against H1N1 Flu and other illnesses, Coverall encourages proper hygiene and ongoing disinfection in between workplace cleanings to optimize germ reduction. Hand hygiene is essential when it comes to reducing the spread of illness.

Now ask yourself if the cleanliness of your facility is in question?

Coverall is your answer to a safer, cleaner work environment. Take a moment to evaluate the condition of your facility by asking the following simple questions.

Does your current cleaning company use advanced cleaning technologies to avoid cross contamination while cleaning? The use of dirty rags or soiled paper towels can lead to cross-contamination of germs. With Coverall, our proprietary cleaning methods use advanced color-coded technology to completely eliminate the risk of cross-contamination.

What do they do to optimize germ removal? Coverall uses Microfiber cleaning cloths designed to be more effective and catch more of the dirt and germs that the traditional cotton rags or paper towels leave behind.

Does your cleaning service use clean water when mopping? We use a single-dip flat mopping method that eliminates the contamination of clean mop water and greatly increases germ removal, making string mops and press wringers obsolete.

Are they cleaning with EPA-registered, hospital grade disinfectants? Our disinfectants show an actual EPA registration number on the back of the bottle with a strength recommended for hospital, commercial and institutional use.

Do they deep clean surfaces and remove germs? Coverall proudly relies on no-touch restroom cleaning to remove all of the harmful germs and ensure that the restroom has an odor-free environment.

Does your service use high-efficiency, multi-filtration HEPA vacuums to improve indoor air quality? These are the Coverall standard, which is why you will never find upright vacuums on-site.

Is your current cleaning company responsive to your needs and requests? Coverall puts the customer first by providing the highest quality cleaning and superior customer service that always exceeds your expectations.
